

Aero Sekur launches sniper suit at DSEi 2009 Stand 2264

Aero Sekur, a technology innovator for the military sector, will display its range of defence force protection products at DSEi 2009. A new sniper suit poncho will be launched and details of a regenerative NBC collective filtration system currently under development will be revealed. A specialist in safety systems and flexible/inflatable structures, Aero Sekur has a forty year history manufacturing military products and offers particular expertise in CBRN protection.

The company will show its complete range of ground defence products which includes respirators, masks, CBRN protective suits, protected environmental structures, collective filtration systems, camouflage solutions and advanced combat clothing. Aero Sekur will also feature its parachute capability ranging from standard troop products, aircraft braking chutes and submunition parachutes through to advanced guided precision drop systems, along with its helicopter emergency flotation and liferaft systems.

Commenting on the company's military sector expertise, and its decision to exhibit at DSEi, Aero Sekur CEO Mark Butler said:

“Aero Sekur is a UK owned company of Italian origin with a growing global presence. We are expanding rapidly in the UK and DSEi is the ideal forum to confirm our existing defence sector expertise and to provide a launch platform for our latest product developments. Our company has a strong track record supporting the defence, aerospace and space markets: successful cross fertilization between our areas of expertise leads to pioneering technologies and radical problem solving solutions.”

Aero Sekur has extensive R&D facilities at its Italian manufacturing centre located 30 miles south of Rome. The company's credentials as a military technology innovator have been endorsed with its role as a key supplier to the Italian Future Soldier programme.
