Aero Sekur, which specialises in the innovative use of flexible materials for defence applications, is launching an enhanced sniper suit poncho at Eurosatory 2010. The global supplier is also announcing its first order for delivery of advanced combat apparel to the Italian MOD under the Forza NEC programme. The company is exhibiting for the first time at the Paris based international defence and security event.

The Spectro sniper suit, which was previewed at Sofex in May 2010, has already attracted strong interest as it offers a high level of IR signature reduction whilst folding into a lightweight, easily carried, pocket sized package. Drawing on the company's forty year track record in advanced flexible materials and high technology processes, the poncho is a third lighter than its nearest competitor product.

Aero Sekur's breaking news for Eurosatory is an order for 92 apparel systems for supply to the Italian MOD. Each system comprises two combat suits, one over garment, three types of boot, one sniper poncho, one NBC permeable suit, an NBC mask and a filter. The order confirms Aero Sekur's role as a major player in the Forza NEC Future Infantryman Programme.

Separate releases in this press pack provide full details of both the above news announcements.

The Anglo-Italian company's expertise in state of the art uniforms and personal protection will be highlighted at Eurosatory across two stands. The displays reflect Aero Sekur's different product groups within its defence portfolio. The company's primary stand, EF760 Hall 6, will focus on products and services for the Italian / Mediterranean market with a complete protection range for the individual soldier. Stand number T361 Hall 5 has a UK focus with emphasis on collective NBC protection (ColPro), steerable airdrop systems, tents and associated items.

Representatives from Aero Sekur's Ground Defence product division will man the company's Italian stand and UK Regional Sales Manager Tom Cramman will lead the second team.
