Aero Sekur, the specialist in safety systems and flexible structures for Ground Forces, has added IDEX to its global programme of military exhibitions.

The company, which has produced a safety and security range for military applications for over 40 years, will present an integrated solution for soldiers including advanced combat clothing, NBC protection, sniper suits and ballistic jackets.

All products in the company's portfolio complement each other to give a combined solution for greater operational effectiveness and troop comfort.

New for the IDEX exhibition is a ballistic jacket offering high levels of protection, low weight and quick release system to allow jettison. Aligned to Aero Sekur's synergistic approach to its product portfolio, the ballistic jacket integrates with the company's NBC and combat suits.

Proven competence is affirmed with Aero Sekur's selection as one of the prime contractors in the Italian army's Soldato Futuro (Future Soldier) programme, which is part of the Forza NEC transformational project designed to provide the military with an integrated clothing range and protection products.
